

Dog Trainer

"I don't train dogs," Inger Martens explains. "I train people." She's been doing just that since age 12, when, after coaching her own dog to behave nobly, she began making house calls for neighbors and found that, in most cases, the humans needed more behavior modification than the canines. Martens, 33, brought her successful Paws for a Minute school to L.A. in 1988 to teach Hollywood honchos how to be better owners. Her unique approach helped Jim Carrey's Jack Russell terrier to stop wetting the rug when it was frightened. Now if she could just teach Carrey to stop chewing the scenery. 310-998-9886.
